A. Academic Integrity:

selected at the beginning of the term, not their name.

1. Attendance/Grading Policy:

II. Books:

- To refine the skills of critical reading, as well as writing and oral communication
- To apply the insights of political philosophy to contemporary social, economic, and political questions
- To evaluate contemporary political philosophies from the perspective of Christian faith
- To carefully assess the adequacy of these rival accounts and their implications
- To understand the ways in which the fundamental questions of politics in the modern era-
- To recognize the historical connections the range of human concerns addressed by political philosophers
- To examine central ideas in the history of political thought

III. Special Requirements:

- Respect: A Mark for All Seasons
- Individual, Reflect
- Intervention, Exploration
- Thematic Focus
- Critical Thinking
- Nurturing Ambition
- Intellectual Enrichment

IV. Literature, Philosophy, Politics, and the Human Condition:

I. Course Description

Road Map: The course has several objectives:

- Vision in political things. To this end, the course concentrates on political thought sources read in
- Understanding the roles of political philosophies in contemporary life, especially those that have been called for, the power of political

Office Hours: Mon-Thur 10-11 am and by appointment

Humanities & Political Traditions

Professor: John Herren

POLITICS AND HUMAN NATURE

Phone: 610.519.4667
Department of Philosophy

Office: SAC 476
HUM 3200/PSY 6875
It is impossible to nothingness. Because we are engaged in a search for wisdom that is both personal and communal and

2